Introduction

MISSION STATEMENT - Boy Scouts of America

It is the mission of the Boy Scouts of America to serve others by helping to instill values in young people and, in other ways, to prepare them to make ethical choices over their lifetime in achieving their full potential. The values we strive to instill are based on those found in the Scout Oath and Law.

SCOUT OATH

On my honor, I will do my best
To do my duty to God and my country and to obey the Scout Law;
To help other people at all times;
To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight.

SCOUT LAW

Trustworthy
Loyal
Helpful
Friendly
Courteous
Kind
Obedient Cheerful
Thrifty
Brave
Clean
Reverent

The Risk Zone

All activities in life have in them an inherent amount of risk taking. No place is this truer than in the outdoors. Successful leaders don't take unnecessary risks; they recognize and manage risk at every opportunity.

Recognize when you are entering:

Before beginning a camping trek, ask, "Have I ----:

- _____ Secured a Tour Permit for the trip?
- _____ Arranged for two-deep leadership?
- _____ Checked the training records to see that all adult leaders are Youth Protection trained?
- _____ Obtained and reviewed health information for all participants?
- _____ Checked my First Aid Kit for completeness?
- _____ Completed a safety check on vehicles to be used for transportation?
- _____ Informed someone of the group's itinerary and emergency contact information?
- _____ Reviewed any additional health and safety guidelines particular to any activity that will take place on the trip?

MANAGE - "THE RISK ZONE."

THE "ORDER OF THE ARROW" - SCOUTING'S HONOR SOCIETY

The Order of the Arrow is a recognized official program activity of the Boy Scouts of America, having its origin in the mind of young E. Urner Goodman in 1915. Then age 25, he had been a Scoutmaster for only a few years and had reluctantly agreed to serve that summer as camp director at Philadelphia's scout camp on idyllic Treasure Island in the Delaware River. While newspaper headlines reported a war in Europe and the loss of the Cunard liner "Lusitania" to a German U-boat's torpedoes within sight of the Irish coast, the new scouting movement was enjoying halcyon days in America, as membership grew rapidly across the nation. Although he would eventually attain a doctorate in education and become National Program Director of the BSA, Urner's thoughts in 1915 were focused on development of methods to teach boys that skill proficiency in Scoutcraft was not enough, rather the principles embodied in the Scout Oath and Law should become realities in the lives of Scouts. As a means of accomplishing this without preaching and within a boy's interest and understanding, peer recognition and the appeal of Indian lore would be utilized. Hence, he devised a program where troops would choose, at the conclusion of camp, those boys from among their number best exemplifying these traits, who would be honored as members of an Indian "lodge". Those elected would be acknowledged as having displayed, in the eyes of their fellow scouts, a spirit of unselfish service and brotherhood. Combining ideas from "The Last of the Mohicans" with the Delaware Indians who had inhabited Treasure Island, he developed dramatic induction ceremonies for the "Order of the Arrow", as the fledgling honor society was dubbed. Even today, these rites make a lasting impression on scouts who have been elected to the "Order of the Arrow".

By 1921, the idea had spread to a score of scout councils in the northeast and the first national meeting of the Order of the Arrow was held. Initially viewed with suspicion by many scouters as a secret society if not an affront to the egalitarian ideals of scouting, support was slow in coming from national headquarters. For many years, the "OA" was considered to be an "experimental" program only. Not until 1948 was E. Urner Goodman's innovation fully integrated into the Scouting program.

Having observed its Diamond Anniversary in 1990, it is evident that the Order of the Arrow has made a significant contribution to Scouting, as we know it today in the United States. The OA's motto, "Brotherhood of Cheerful Service," is more than just an empty slogan for many Arrowmen, who constitute a valuable council resource for camp promotion, improvement projects, and summer camp staffing.

The OA, at its best, continues to be a teaching tool for scouting ideals. Many believe that the OA helps in retaining older boys in scouting whom otherwise tend to lose interest upon reaching high school age. Notably, OA guidelines place great importance on preserving Lodge leadership in the hands of its boy members, headed by a Chief, Vice Chief(s), and an Executive Committee, all of whom must be under age 21. These youth plan and implement Lodge activities, service projects, publications, annual budgets, and conduct troop elections upon the Scoutmaster's request. Adults are crucial to the OA program's success as advisors.

To be eligible for election to the Order of the Arrow, a Scout must:

- Be at least First Class rank;
- Have at least 15 nights of camping, including a 6-day long-term camp;
- Participate in the "Ordeal" and induction ceremony.

(Somewhat modified requirements apply to Explorers and adults).

To alleviate lingering concerns in some quarters regarding the ceremonial aspects of the Order of the Arrow, the BSA has officially stated:

"The induction is not a hazing or an initiation ceremony. The Order is not a secret Scout organization, and its ceremonies are open to any parent, Scout leader, or religious leader. There is an element of mystery in the ceremonies for the sake of its effect on the candidates. For this reason, ceremonies are not put on in public. The ceremonies are not objectionable to any religious group."

Following 10 months as an "Ordeal" member, the Arrowman may participate in the "Brotherhood" ceremony, which signifies the sealing of his membership and an additional emphasis on OA ideals and purposes.

After an additional 2 years have elapsed, exceptional OA leaders may be recognized by conferring of the "Vigil Honor". Generally speaking, only 2% of the Lodge's membership may be selected each year for this highest of Lodge honors. A special ceremony, devised by Dr. Goodman in 1915 and closely based on ancient Indian traditions, culminates this experience.

All Order of the Arrow members are reminded that their primary duty always remains to their own troop, which elected them in the first place as a result of their cheerful service to their fellow unit members. OA Lodge activities are intended to supplement, and not replace, troop activities. Probably the single most often-heard complaint directed towards the OA program is that of Arrowmen who have forgotten this cardinal principle.

OA Lodges meet with other lodges in their sections each year and attend national conventions held at a major university every two years. Dr. E. Urner Goodman attended his last National Order of the Arrow Conference at Colorado State Univ. in 1979 where he was hailed by the 4,000 Arrowmen present with a thunderous standing ovation. As he spoke movingly of his vision in developing the Order of the Arrow as a "Thing of the Spirit" that day 64 distant years ago on the misty shores of the Delaware, those of us gathered in the shadows of the snow-capped Rockies realized that though a frail, elderly man stood before us, yet the spirit borne within was truly one of eternal youth, for as long as men value brotherhood and strive to love one another.

The Codes of Camping

THE OUTDOOR CODE

I agree to join with the Boy Scouts of America in protecting my country's natural beauty and conserving her natural resources.

The Outdoor Code

As an American, I will do my best to:

Be clean in my outdoor manners.

I will treat the outdoors as a heritage.

I will try to improve it for myself and others.

I will keep my trash and garbage out of America's waters, fields, woods, and roadways.

Be careful with fire.

I will prevent wildfire.

I will build my fire in a safe place and be sure it is out before I leave.

Be considerate in the outdoors.

I will treat public and private property with respect.

I will remember that use of the outdoors is a right that I can lose by abuse.

and

Be conservation minded.

I will learn how to practice good conservation of soil, waters, forests, minerals, grasslands, wildlife, and energy.

I will urge others to do the same.

HIGH ADVENTURE ETHIC

The tremendous rewards of high-adventure treks are drawing more and more people to the backcountry. At the same time, the vast territory suitable for treks is shrinking in size. More people and less land mean we all must be careful not to endanger the wild outdoors we have come to enjoy.

High Adventure Ethic

A good way to protect the backcountry is to remember that while you are there, you are a visitor. When you visit a friend you are always careful to leave that person's home just as you found it. You would never think of dropping litter on the carpet, chopping down trees in the yard, putting soap in the drinking water, or marking your name on the living room wall. When you visit the backcountry, the same courtesies apply. Leave everything just as you found it.

Hiking and camping without a trace are signs of an expert outdoorsman, and of a Scout or Scouter who cares for the environment. Travel lightly on the land.

“LEAVE NO TRACE”

The Six Principles of “Leave No Trace”

“Leave No Trace” is a nationally recognized outdoor skills and ethics education program. The Boy Scouts of America is committed to this program. The six principles of Leave No Trace are not rules; they are guidelines to follow at all times.

The Leave No Trace principles might not seem important at first glance, but their value is apparent when considering the combined effects of millions of outdoor visitors. One poorly located campsite or campfire is of little significance, but thousands of such instances seriously degrade the outdoor experience for all. Leaving no trace is everyone’s responsibility.

1. Plan Ahead and Prepare

Proper trip planning and preparation helps hikers and campers accomplish trip goals safely and enjoyably while minimizing damage to natural and cultural resources. Poorly prepared campers, confronted with unexpected situations, often resort to high-impact solutions that degrade the outdoors or put themselves at risk.

Poor planning often results in:

- High-risk travel, because campers failed to obtain information concerning geography and weather;
- Improperly located campsites, because groups failed to plan enough time to reach their intended destination;
- Improper campfires or excessive trash, because of failure to plan meals or bring proper equipment;
- Discomfort and not much fun.

2. Camp and Travel on Durable Surfaces

Damage to land occurs when surface vegetation or communities of organisms are trampled beyond recovery. The resulting barren areas lead to the development of undesirable trails, campsites, and soil erosion.

Should you concentrate activity, or spread out?

In high-use areas, campers should generally concentrate activity. Use existing trails whenever possible and select heavily used campsites so that further damage is unlikely with careful use.

In areas of little or no use, campers should generally spread out. When hiking, take different paths to avoid creating new trails that cause erosion. When camping, disperse tents and cooking activities—and move camp daily—to avoid creating permanent-looking campsites.

These guidelines apply to most alpine settings and may be different for other areas, such as deserts. Learn the Leave No Trace techniques for your crew's specific activity or the area in which you're trekking. Check with land managers if you are unsure of the proper technique.

3. Pack It In, Pack It Out

This common saying is a simple yet effective way to get backcountry visitors to take their trash home with them. There is no reason why people cannot carry out of the backcountry the extra materials they carried in with them in the first place. Though most trash and litter in the backcountry is not significant in terms of the long-term ecological health of an area, it does rank high as a problem in the minds of many backcountry visitors. Trash and litter detract from an area's naturalness. Accept the challenge of packing out everything you can.

4. Properly Dispose of What You Can't Pack Out

Backcountry users create wastewater and body waste, which requires proper disposal.

Wastewater

Prevent contamination of natural water sources: disperse dishwater at least 200 feet (about seventy strides for an adult) from springs, streams, and lakes. Use soap (biodegradable) 200 feet or more from any water source. Minimize the need to pack out food scraps by carefully planning meals.

Human waste

Proper human-waste disposal prevents the spread of disease and exposure to others. Catholes six to eight inches deep and 200 feet from water, trails, and campsites are often the easiest and most practical way to dispose of feces. In some cases, it may be necessary or required to pack out human waste. Securely package feces in a plastic bag and carry in a metal container until you reach a disposal site.

5. Leave What You find

Allow others a sense of discovery: Leave rocks, plants, animals, archaeological artifacts, and other objects as you find them. It may be illegal to remove artifacts.

Minimize site alterations.

Do not dig tent trenches or build lean-tos, tables, or chairs. Avoid hammering nails into trees, hacking at them with hatchets or saws, or damaging bark and roots by tying horses to trees for extended periods. If you clear an area of surface rocks or twigs, replace these items before leaving. On high-impact sites, it is appropriate to clean the site and dismantle inappropriate user-built facilities, such as multiple fire rings and log seats or tables. Consider the idea that good campsites are found and not made.

6. Minimize the Use and Impact of fire

Some people would not think of camping without a campfire. Yet the naturalness of many areas has been degraded by overuse of fires and increasing demand for firewood. Lightweight camp stoves are essential for low-impact camping and have encouraged a shift away from fires. Stoves are fast, eliminate the need to consider the availability of firewood when selecting a campsite, and enable trekkers to perform better personal hygiene.

In building a fire, the most important consideration is the potential for resource damage. The best place to build a fire is within an existing campfire ring in a well-placed campsite. Choose not to have a fire in areas with little wood-at higher elevations, in heavily used areas with a limited wood supply, or in desert settings. True Leave No Trace fires show virtually no evidence of having ever been constructed. If a site has two or more fire rings, you may dismantle all but one and scatter the materials in the surrounding area. Be certain all wood and campfire debris is dead out.

WILDERNESS USE POLICY OF THE BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

For the purposes of this policy, all privately or publicly owned backcountry and designated wildernesses are to be considered “wilderness.” The Outdoor Code of the Boy Scouts of America applies to outdoor behavior generally, but for treks into wilderness, Leave No Trace camping methods must be used. Within the outdoor program of the Boy Scouts of America, there are many different camping-skill levels. Camping practices that are appropriate for day outings, long-term Scout camp, or short-term unit camping do not apply to wilderness areas. Wherever they go, Scouts and Explorers must adopt attitudes and patterns of behavior that respect the rights of others, including future generations, to enjoy the outdoors.

In wildernesses, it is crucial to minimize our impact on particularly fragile ecosystems such as mountains, lakes, streams, deserts, and seashores. Since our recreational use varies from one season of the year to the next, we must adjust to these changing conditions as well, to avoid damaging the environment.

The Boy Scouts of America emphasizes these practices for all troops, posts, and ships planning to use the wilderness:

- Contact the landowner or land-managing agency (Forest Service, National Park Service, Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, state agency, private landowner, etc.) well in advance of the outing to learn the regulations for that area and to obtain required permits and current maps.
- Always obtain a tour permit, available through local council service centers. Meet all conditions specified and carry the permit on the trip.
- Participate in Leave No Trace training for adult leaders, or be proficient and experienced in the leadership and skills required for treks into the wilderness.
- Match the ruggedness of high-adventure experiences to the skills, physical ability, and maturity of those taking part. Save more rugged treks for older youth members who are more proficient and experienced in outdoor skills.
- For your group, conduct pre-trip training that stresses proper wilderness behavior, rules, and skills for all of the conditions that may be encountered.
- Use backpacking stoves, particularly where the fuel supply is limited or open fires are restricted. An adult knowledgeable in the use of the stove(s) must supervise. If a fire is necessary, keep it as small as possible and use established fire lays where available in safe areas. After use, erase all signs.

- Emphasize the need for minimizing impact on the land through proper camping practices, and for preserving the solitude and quiet of remote areas. Camp at low-use areas; avoid popular sites that show signs of heavy use.
- Leave dogs, radios, and cassette or CD players at home.
- Use plastic (not metal or glass) food containers that are lightweight and reusable. Carry out unburnable trash of your own and any left by others.
- Dig catholes for latrines and locate them at least 200 feet from any source of natural water.
- Wash clothes, dishes, and bodies at least 200 feet from any source of natural water.
- Where a choice is available, select equipment in earth-tone colors that blend with natural surroundings.
- Look at and photograph; never pick or collect.
- Follow trail switchbacks and stay on established trails.
- Treat wildlife with respect and take precautions to avoid dangerous encounters with wildlife. Leave snakes, bears, ground squirrels, and other wildlife alone.
- On a canoeing trip, carry canoes into the foliage on shore so they will not be visible to other outdoor users.
- Respect the quest of others to enjoy the solitude and silence of the backcountry.
- Demonstrate respect by taking care of the outdoors. Land stewardship is everyone's responsibility. Do your part to leave wild America for future generations.

SEWI Camps

ROBERT S. LYLE SCOUT RESERVATION

DESCRIPTION:

Robert S. Lyle Scout Reservation is the long-term summer camp of the Southeast Wisconsin Council and is located near Elcho, Wisconsin, on the Wolf River. It has 640 acres and includes two lakes.

This fun-filled summer camp program consists of activities at the waterfront, scout-craft area, shooting sports, and nature area along with opportunities to brave the rapids of the Wolf River during an exciting canoe or tube trip.

This wilderness camp provides an excellent chance for scouts to learn or polish the basic skills of outdoor camping.

Robert S. Lyle also hosts the Webelos Long-Term program, a four day, three night, camping experience that furthers their excitement in the scouting program.

Located in the beauty of the North Woods, Robert S. Lyle Scout Reservation provides a week-long learning experience for scouts of all ages!

BSA National Camping Opportunities

HIGH ADVENTURE PROGRAMS

Here is a quick summary of general information regarding national BSA camping/high adventure opportunities. To obtain additional information, contact the Council Service Center.

PHILMONT SCOUT RANCH

Philmont is the oldest and most famous of Scouting's high adventure bases. Philmont is 137,000 acres of rugged trails, soaring peaks, and spectacular scenery in the heart of New Mexico's rugged Sangre de Cristo Mountains. Its more than 280 miles of trails, and its challenging, inspiring wilderness programs have earned it the nickname of "University of the Outdoors," its "curriculum" is rugged, physically demanding, and packed with excitement, its adventure programs fall into six major categories, including:

Expeditions; These 12-day treks through the mountains give crews the opportunity to learn technical rock climbing, archaeological excavation techniques, and wilderness survival. You'll saddle up your horse, pack your gear aboard a sure-footed burro, and rediscover the days of the Old West, the timeless skills of the "mountain men" of old, and the thrill of panning for gold in an icy stream.

Crew size: 4-12 persons per crew, including leaders.
Leadership: One adult (21 or older) required per crew.

Cavalcades; The emphasis here is on learning the riding and packing skills that are traditional in the American West, while traveling some of Philmont's most scenic trails on horseback.

Crew size: 10-15 per crew, including leaders.
Leadership: One adult (21 or older) required per crew.

Mountain Men and Women; Under the leadership of one of Philmont's experienced rangers, these programs feature six-day backpacking trips in beautiful wilderness areas, and are open to individual scouts who are not with a contingent.

Crew size: Organized at Philmont.
Leadership: Provided by Philmont.

Rayado Men and Women; Limited to persons who were at least 15 years old as of January 1 of the year of the trek and who have mastered basic outdoor skills, these are demanding programs of advanced outdoor leadership featuring hiking, campcraft, and wilderness problem solving in an unparalleled setting.

Crew size: Organized at Philmont.
Leadership: Provided by Philmont.

Trail Crew; This phenomenal and free 26-day program is designed for a select number of male scouts over the age of 16, who perform vital conservation work and trail maintenance as part of it. Each trail crew spends 14 days in a backcountry work project, and then enjoys a 12-day high adventure expedition under the leadership of the trail crew foreman.

Crew size: 10 campers per crew.
Leadership: Provided by Philmont.

FLORIDA NATIONAL HIGH ADVENTURE SEA BASE

Located on an island in the heart of the Florida Keys, 75 miles south of Miami, this is one of the world's finest facilities for aquatic adventure. The base is fully equipped for boardsailing, motor boating, canoeing, deep-sea fishing, lobstering, snorkeling, scuba diving and certification. In addition, it offers-sailing craft ranging in length from 14 to 65 feet. It has six major program areas to choose from including:

Coral Reef Sailing; Test your nautical skills as one of six crew members of a 44-foot sailboat on a seven-day voyage to excitement. This flexible program allows your crew to chart its own course with the aid of a licensed captain. You can plan a visit to Key West, the Marquesas Islands, or even beyond. Or you can snorkel through seemingly endless reef beds or troll the Gulf Stream for fighting sport fish.

Crew size: Maximum of six per boat, including adult/leader.

Mariner Sailing Adventure; This program enables almost any "landlubber" to become an experienced sailor after a week of intensive training and actual operating experience. Two days of instruction at the base are followed by a cruise through the reefs and islands of the Keys aboard a sleek 25-foot sailing vessel. Each boat sleeps five, has its own galley and head, and is equipped with an auxiliary motor and radio for safety.

Crew size: 7-9 per crew, including leaders.

Sea Exploring; You'll follow the winds to the sparkling beaches of the Bahamas. Enroute, you'll visit remote islands seldom seen by tourists and explore waters so clear that you can see to a depth of 100 feet or more. For added adventure, prevailing winds and weather conditions will dictate the exact itinerary of your 65-foot yacht.

Crew size; 18-22 per crew, including leaders.

Scuba Expedition; Each trip is custom-designed for your post and 5TT-certified divers have the opportunity for unlimited supervised diving among the Keys, in the Bahamas, or at the fabulous John Pennekamp Coral Reef State Park.

Crew size: Maximum of 12, including leaders.

Scuba Certification; You can come home from this program an accomplished diver, even if you've never had a mask on before. During seven days of instructions, both in a class room setting and in the base's specifically designed diving tanks, you'll be taught everything you need to know by a seasoned instructor, then move on to open water for your first exploratory dive. After checkout dives, you'll become a certified diver. All equipment is furnished.

Crew size: 6-8 persons, including leaders.

Out Island/Robinson Crusoe; Experience the life of a beachcomber in your own-island paradise, with the benefit of such modern amenities as sail and power boats, camping and snorkeling gear, and fishing tackle. You'll also have a chance to see and study the ways of nature first-hand on the small, pristine islands of the Keys.

Crew size: 6-8 persons, including leaders.

NORTHERN TIER NATIONAL HIGH ADVENTURE PROGRAMS

Headquartered at the Charles L. Sommers Wilderness Canoe Base in northern Minnesota, with satellite bases in Canada and Wisconsin, these programs offer the best in Northwood's wilderness canoeing. You'll paddle the legendary streams and lakes of the Chippewa, the Sioux, and the French Canadian fur traders of the 1800's and come home with enough memories to last a lifetime.

Five different experiences are available, including:

Sommers Canoe Base Trips; Take your choice of two different trip itineraries. You can explore Minnesota's great wilderness canoe area, which provides fun and challenge for beginner through intermediate canoeists, or you can travel through Ontario's Quetico Provincial Park, where intermediate to advanced canoeists will find primitive beauty, solitude, and great fishing.

Crew size: 6-9 persons, including adult Explorer leaders over 21.

Northern Expeditions; If you're looking for the most rugged advanced wilderness canoeing, you'll find it in the Canadian bush country of Manitoba. You'll also find some of the most diverse canoeing anywhere, in spectacular rivers and picturesque lakes. Most crews travel to the area by optional charter floatplane, beginning and ending their expedition at Scout Lake, accessible only by air.

Crew size: 6-9 persons, including adult Explorer leaders over 21.

Atikokan Canoeing; Operating out of the newest of the Northern Tier bases at Atikokan, Ontario, these trips for intermediate and advanced canoeists take you deep into the caribou country of northern Ontario.

Crew size: 6-9 persons, including leaders.

Northern Wisconsin Canoeing; Featuring the ultimate in Northwood's scenery, beautiful campsites, and easy traveling, this program is perfect for the canoeist with limited experience.

Crew size: 6-9 persons, including leaders.

Nor'wester Program; This combination backpacking canoeing excursion is an advanced training program demanding a variety of wilderness and outdoor skills. It takes you from Duluth, Minnesota to northern Wisconsin, to the Porcupine Mountains and/or Isle Royale National Park, to Grand Portage, to the Sommers Canoe Base in Ely, Minnesota, and finally back to Duluth. Minimum age is 16.

Crew size: Individual sign-up.

WISCONSIN STATE CAPITOL MADISON, WI

DESCRIPTION:

If you plan to visit Madison touring the Wisconsin Capitol building could be a highlight of your trip. Constructed between 1906 and 1917, the Wisconsin State Capitol is located between two beautiful lakes on the Isthmus of Madison. The white marble building stands just a few feet shorter than the Federal Capitol Building in Washington D.C. and is home to the offices of the Senate and Assembly, Supreme Court, Offices of the Governor, the Attorney General and many other supporting agencies and staff.

HOURS:

Free tours of the Capitol are given year round, Monday-Saturday from 9:00 to 11:00 and from 1:00 to 4:00 PM. On Sunday, they are given at 1:00, 2:00 and 3:00 PM. Tours included a guided walk through the decorative and prominent history of the Senate and Assembly Chambers, Public Hearing rooms, and The Supreme Court as well as other historic areas of the Wisconsin State Capitol.

DIRECTIONS:

The Capitol is located in downtown Madison

MORE INFORMATION:

You may reach the tour desk by calling (608)-266-0382 or by contacting the office of your State Senator or Representative.

OTHER

YERKES OBSERVATORY WILLIAMS BAY, WISCONSIN

DESCRIPTION:

Yerkes Observatory is a research branch of the Department of Astronomy and Astrophysics of the University of Chicago. Until the mid-1960's, Yerkes Observatory housed all of the Department's activities (including managing the operations for McDonald Observatory in Texas from 1932-1962). Today the 77-acre, park-like site in southeast Wisconsin provides laboratory space and access to telescopes for research and instruction in ways that complement other facilities available to the Department. A substantial fraction of the University's library holdings in astronomy are housed at Yerkes.

HOURS:

Yerkes provides tours every Saturday morning throughout the year at fifteen minutes past ten, eleven, and Noon. There is no charge, but we appreciate donations.

DIRECTIONS:

Take Highway 43 all the way to the Highway 67 Elkhorn/Williams Bay exit. Turn south onto Highway 67 towards Williams Bay, and drive about six miles to the intersection of Highway 50. Cross Highway 50 (you will see Mercy Clinic immediately on your left) Continue downhill almost exactly one mile (you will pass Charlie-O's Restaurant on your right) to where Highway 67 does a t-intersection with Geneva Street (the Williams Bay Fire Department is immediately ahead of you). Turn right, and go uphill, curving to your left on Highway 67/Geneva Street almost exactly one mile up to the unlit brown sign with white lettering that says YERKES OBSERVATORY. (Please note that, because of ongoing research, our sign is NOT lit up.) Turn into the Yerkes Observatory Drive, and park in front of the Observatory. (If you see the illuminated Aurora University sign on your left, you've gone exactly one block too far. Turn around).
